

Parents/carers must consider the effect of taking their child out of the academy for holidays which should be taken during academy holidays instead.

Truancy watch

Sandwell operates Truancy Watch every day. An education welfare officer and a police officer travel around Sandwell and, if they see a person whom they believe is of statutory school age out during school hours, they will be stopped whether they are with an adult or not. If a young person is out on their own or in a group, they may be picked up and returned to school.

The school and the Local Education Authority will be informed of any young person stopped by Truancy Watch for recording purposes and also to allow further investigation if necessary.

SCHOOL ATTENDANCE MATTERS!

And finally

Your child has the legal—and moral—right to an education to help him or her achieve as much as possible and give them the best start to adult life—but they must be in school to benefit from what is being offered and it's your legal responsibility to ensure this.

It is our school policy that if your child's attendance falls below 85%, unless medical evidence is provided or exceptional circumstances proven, any further absences will be unauthorised.

Check List

- It is parents/carers responsibility to ensure their child attends their academy

Academy Attendance Matters!

How to ensure your child reaches his or her full potential.

SCHOOL ATTENDANCE MATTERS!

The staff and governors of Ocker Hill Junior School are committed to delivering the highest possible standard of education to your child. However he or she cannot benefit from this unless they attend school every day they possibly can. It is a fact that high achievement is directly linked to attendance. It doesn't matter whether your child is a high achiever or not—he or she cannot reach his or her full potential unless he or she is in school.

The purpose of this leaflet is a reminder of what you as parents or carers need to do to help your child to get as much out of his or her time in school as possible and to point out some of the ways that this aim is not always met,

SCHOOL ATTENDANCE MATTERS! The Law

Section 444 of the Education Act 1996 states that it is the responsibility of parents/carers to ensure that their child attends the school at which they are on roll regularly and failure to do so could result in legal action being taken against them.

Penalty notices can also be issued for poor attendance.

It is much better to encourage good school attendance at an early age to minimise problems later. For most pupils it is a routine for them to attend school but this is not the case for all children. If you are having problems in getting your child to school contact either someone in school to arrange for a discussion as soon as possible. There is a lot that can be done to help pupils experiencing problems but the school needs to know what the problems are and it's better to try to resolve difficulties at an early stage.

Registration

It's essential that your child registers in school. Registers are legal documents and are the only evidence that your child is in school. It is also important under health and safety—we need to know who is on site during the school day. It's no good your child saying they were in school if they are not registered—there will be no proof and the law believes the register!

Punctuality

Lateness is a problem. Even if your child is only a few minutes late it can add up to a significant amount of time over a long period. If your child is late he or she may miss registration—or disrupt his or her own learning and the learning of others in the class.

School starts at 8.50 a.m.

SCHOOL ATTENDANCE MATTERS! Absences

There are only 3 reasons for absence which form a “statutory defence” in law. The main one is absence due to illness. It is only the school which can decide that an absence should be “authorised” i.e accepted as a genuine reason for absence. Minor illness should not automatically result in having time off - is it really necessary? If you really think having time off is justified it should be for the shortest possible time—every day matters! It is important that you contact the school as soon as possible on the first day of absence. The school operates a first day calling system so, if you don't let the school know the reason for absence, you will be called. If a pattern of absence starts to form, the senior attendance improvement officer may be asked to make contact with you to discuss the reasons for the absence. This should not be seen as a bad thing, their preference will be to help in resolving the difficulties so that your child can return to school but they also have responsibility to assess whether legal action would be appropriate.

This will only be done if there is a reluctance for parents/carers and pupils to co-operate in resolving problems causing poor attendance—the preferred option is always to get things sorted out and for attendance to improve.

Medical/dental appointments

Where possible, these appointments should always be made out of school time but, if this is unavoidable, it should not be necessary to miss a whole day.

SCHOOL ATTENDANCE MATTERS Holidays

It is unfortunate that holidays are cheaper in term time and this means that there is a temptation for parents/carers to book their holidays then. However this results in time being missed in school which is quite difficult for a pupil to make up. He/she will have to copy up missed work to allow him or her to keep up with the rest of the class but this is never as good as having the teaching accompanying the work—especially if your child has difficulties understanding the lesson. Many parents believe that they have a right to take their children on holiday for up to ten days in term time—this is not so!

Another problem is that it is not only your child's learning that could be affected but also the rest of the pupils in the class who will have to wait whilst the teacher brings your child up to date which obviously means more work for the teacher. It only takes several children to be away on holiday over a period of time to seriously disrupt the work of the whole class.
